At this stage, no uniform technology standard for recognizing and implementing DNT signals has been finalized. As such, we do not currently respond to DNT browser signals or any other mechanism that automatically communicates your choice not to be tracked online. We may collect and use non-PII to help us improve our services, customize your experience and analyze use of our services. This Privacy Policy does not limit our use or disclosure of collected non-PII. We reserve the right to collect, use and disclose such non-PII to our partners, advertisers and other third parties at our sole discretion.

Essential cookies may also help inform Joy Cone whether you require, or have already been served, an affirmative consent request in connection with our data policies. Essential cookies may also include analytics cookies, which provide us data that allows Joy Cone to better understand its users and improve the Site based on what we have learned from that data.

Preference Cookies. Other cookies may be used to collect and process information about your preferences and similar choices in connection with the Site in order to optimize your browsing experience.
